

Bio

Jenn is a hilarious musical comedy performer who has been described as “part Courtney Love, but classier... part Weird Al, but prettier!” She first performed her original tunes in the NYC based sketch troupes, “Hits Like A Girl” and “MOUTH.” She then created her own act and took it to the comedy club circuit - just Jenn, her guitar and a touch of Brooklyn attitude.

She recently acted and performed her songs in the independent feature film, “Stand Ups,” and also performed at the 2004 Boston Comedy Festival. Jenn is also half of the angriest girl band ever, “Dirty Jesus,” and in collaboration with playwright Elizabeth Gutterman, Jenn wrote the music for the title song of her play, “Becoming.”

You can hear Jenn’s sultry voice on radio commercials and on MTV announcing all the hot show info for Spring Break and more. Most recently, one of Jenn’s parodies was played on the Dr. Demento radio show. Jenn’s creative desire to be involved in every area of the entertainment business has made a big impression on colleges, clubs and talent scouts around the country.
